Volunteering in Wildlife Aid

Becoming a volunteer, here in Wildlife Aid, is rewarding as it is very important to our work. Without our volunteers, we would not be able to operate.

You might be accepting patients into our center at the gate, feeding recovering animals and cleaning the wound or dirt, and there is lots of cleaning! Bathing these animals regularly, usually weekly. Wherever you can help, you will be caring for wildlife and giving our patients a second chance.

Requirements

- If you're 16 or over, care about British wildlife and want to make a real difference, then we'd love to have you join our team. Volunteers under the age of 18 must have the written agreement of their parents.
- We have volunteers of different backgrounds. Many of our volunteering jobs need no work experience, but volunteers under the age of 20 must receive training before work.
- Your helping hand will be required from 09:00 to 16:00 on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.
- Work experience placements are available to those aged 22 years or over.

Job arrangements

| Time | Jobs |
|---|---|
| Monday | Cleaning animals' homes |
| Wednesday | Making animals' food |
| Friday | Examining the patients |
| Saturday | Giving animals a bath |

An application form must be completed. All applications will be reviewed equally. However, we always put the needs of our patients first. Therefore, if you do not disclose something on your application that may later affect your ability to care for our patients, then we reserve the right to put your volunteering role to end immediately.

21. What can a volunteer do in Wildlife Aid?

A. Search for injured animals.

B. Wash animals once a week.

C. Give lectures about animals.

D. Bring animals home-made food.

22. What is the lowest age limit for joining Wildlife Aid?

A. 16. B. 18. C. 20. D. 22

23. When are volunteers expected to check animals' physical condition?

A. On Monday. B. On Wednesday.

C. On Friday. D. On Saturday.

Carig Foster is an award-winning filmmaker. He has spent much of his life making documentary (纪录片) films about nature. In 2021, he felt extremely tired after working so hard. He decided it would help if he spent time connecting with nature in a wild environment. It was fortunate that his home on the southwest tip of the African continent was right next door to the South Atlantic Ocean. Craig, a strong swimmer, devoted himself to going free diving every single day for the next ten years.

Just metres from the shoreline lies the Great African Sea Forest. In this giant forest live thousands of different ecosystems (生态系统). Many have never been studied before and little is known about them. As time passed, Craig began to realize that species that had never been discovered were living right beneath his flippered (穿着脚蹼的) feet.

Craig kept to his devotion for years. One day, he spotted something unusual on the seabed. He swam closer to take a look. It appeared to be a stone covered in different kinds of shells. As he approached, the stone moved suddenly. The shells fell from it, revealing a female octopus (章鱼) that shot off into the distance. The octopus had been hiding from something. Even though the meeting only lasted seconds, the octopus took over Craig's life for the next 12 months.

Each morning, he would dive into the same place and search for the octopus. Over time, the octopus began to lose any fear of this human. Her tentacles (触须) would reach out to Craig as if she were welcoming him to her home.

The result of this year-long relationship was the documentary My Octopus Teacher. The 85-minute program is a pure delight as you watch the relationship between the unlikely pair develop. If you enjoy nature programs or are curious about what it is like to free dive in a wild environment, we cannot suggest My Octopus Teacher highly enough. It will take your breath away.

24. What made Carig decide to go free diving every day?

A. His desire to make a new film.

B. His hobby of discovering nature.

C. His great interest in swimming.

D. His tiredness from so much work.

25. What do we know about the Great African Sea Forest from paragraph 2?

A. It is far off the coast of Africa.

B. It is home to different wildlife.

C. It is at the bottom of deep sea.

D. It is attractive to diving lovers.

26. What do paragraphs 3 and 4 focus on?

A. How Carig and the octopus became friends.

B. How the female octopus escaped from Carig.

C. How the octopus felt the presence of humans.

D. How the octopus welcomed Carig to her home.

27. What does the author want to stress in the end?

A. Making films is a good way to reduce stress.

B. An octopus could become a human teacher.

C. My Octopus Teacher is a good documentary.

D. Humans should live with nature peacefully.

Love them or hate them, filters（滤镜）have become a general feature of modern social media content. Their goal is to make people look different from their real-life appearance—often so attractively it appears. They can be fun, easy to use and extremely convincing, but they also leave people worried they will make it harder for viewers to determine what's real online and will develop unrealistic beauty standards, particularly among teenage users.

Now, a new French law forces influencers to inform their audience when they apply filters to photos and videos. "This is a huge step in the right direction for how filters are used online," French lawmaker Arthur Delaporte, who helped introduce the law, said in an interview.

The law not only applies to influencers in France, but also to influencers abroad seeking to reach a French audience. Under the law, photos and videos that have been modified（修图）by image processing software need to be published with the label（标签）"edited image". The law-breakers can result in up to six months of imprisonment (监禁) and a fine of $300,000".

Gaelle Prudencio, a French influencer who promotes body positivity, said that she is in favor of the law. "It seems that we barely see an unmodified photo online," she said. She believes that too many heavily modified images on social media can harm young people who have not yet formed their own identities. "Teenagers especially can lose sight of reality and find themselves making an appointment with a surgeon to perform this or that plastic surgery (整形手术)," she said.

France is not the first country to seek to legislate（立法）on how influencers use filters. In 2021, lawmakers in Norway passed a law forcing influencers and advertisers to label their modified photos. Last year, a report from Britain's lower house of Parliament urged the government to introduce legislation that ensures commercial images are labeled with a logo where any part of the body has been modified.

28. What is one of functions of using filters on social media?

A. Making users appear natural.　　B. Creating new beauty standards.

C. Offering a fun way to make up.　　D. Adding attractiveness to users.

29. What does a new French law say about using filters?

A. It stops influencers from using filters.

B. The modified photos should be marked.

C. It is only aimed at native French people.

D. Those breaking it will be given a warning.

30. What can we learn from Galle Prudencio's words?

A. Teenagers need plastic surgeries badly.

B. The law is harmful to her positive image.

C. Social media is full of unmodified photos.

D. Students may follow unreal beauty blindly.

31. Which of the following can be the best title for the text?

A. Influencers should make clear the use of filters

B. People should learn how to modify their photos

C. Filters and image-modifying apps are easy to use

D. Plastic surgeries do great harm to teenagers' health

D

There are about 187,000 miles of water pipes in England. However, around ninety million tons of water are lost through leaks (渗漏) of these pipes daily. When there is an underground leak, the repair team have to try their best to avoid the sewer pipes, gas supplies and electricity cables (电缆线) to locate it. "Half of the leaks are not visible, so we found them out through monitoring the water flow in our network," said Colin from a water supply company in the United Kingdom. "We've covered the biggest leaks that people see. It's the smaller, hidden leaks that we need to find."

Fortunately, a kind of robot is well on its way to helping deal with the situation. A new generation of underground robotic pipe patrollers (巡视者) is being tested at the University of Sheffield.

Pipebots are small, intelligent and mobile robots with cameras for eyes. They are being developed to check pipes and find weaknesses before they develop into leaks. Professor Kirill explained: "They move along the pipe, taking pictures and listening to the pipe through a microphone. They're meant to make decisions about whether the pipe is likely to develop a fault or not."

AI expert Professor Netta Cohen says the biggest challenge for pipebots is communication. "Underground, there's no GPS. So they will communicate with each other at short distances, using Wi-Fi." Thus, she and her team are developing a system where a larger "mother" robot carries a group of small robots "They will let these little guys go into smaller pipes and collect them when they're done," explained Professor Cohen. "We will need a whole society of these robots to work in all of the pipes."

The research team hopes the first pipebots will be applied to the water network within five years. Until then, each time there is a leak, the water companies will have to dig around the maze (迷宫) of sewer pipes, gas supplies and cables to fix it.

32. What does the underlined word "visible" in paragraph 1 probably mean?

A. Advanced. B. Optional. C. Noticeable. D. Normal.

33. What are pipebots designed to do?

A. To spot the leaking places.

B. To repair the leaking pipes.

C. To find the potential leaks

D. To decide on the pipe sizes

34. How do the researchers make pipebots work more efficiently?

A. By developing their communication skills.

B. By having a team of pipebots work together.

C. By directing a mother robot to work individually.

D. By using Wi-Fi to connect the long-distance robots.

35. What's the research team's attitude towards the pipebots?

A. Doubtful. B. Negative. C. Uncertain. D. Confident.

第四部分 写作（共两节，满分 30 分）

第一节（满分 15 分）

假定你是李华，你的英国朋友 Jenny 喜欢收藏 Labubu 玩偶 (dolls)，但她的父母不理解，甚至没收了她的收藏品。她向你讲述自己的遭遇，请你给她回一封邮件，内容包括：

1. 安慰对方；
2. 提出建议；
3. 表达祝愿。

注意：

1. 词数 80 左右；
2. 请按如下格式在答题纸的相应位置作答。

Dear Jenny,

Yours sincerely,
Li Hua

第二节（满分 15 分）

阅读下面材料，根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写一段，使之构成一篇完整的短文。

When I was twenty, I was studying art at a university in New Orleans. I wanted to do something meaningful not just for myself, so I worked as a junior volunteer at the city's Children's Hospital. The hospital took care of children who were very sick — some used wheelchairs (轮椅), some had poor hearing or sight, and others needed long-term treatment.

Despite the children's difficult situations, the hospital wasn't a sad place. It was full of bright colors, and the doctors and volunteers tried to create a happy, supportive environment. My job was to spend time with the children, playing games with them.

One afternoon, Lily, a little girl who was about six years old, came up to me. She had a serious breathing problem and often felt tired, but she always smiled and seemed full of energy. "Can you teach me to paint with watercolors?" she asked in a soft voice. I said yes right away. Then we sat on the floor together, and I started by showing her how to hold a brush and mix colors. At first, her hands shook a little, and the paint went outside the lines. But she kept trying, and after a few weeks, she improved greatly. She always practiced drawing trees and flowers in her notebook.

注意：

1. 续写词数 80 左右；文章开头已给出，不计入总词数；
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

One day, Lily held my hand and said with desire, "I want to go outside and paint a real forest."

参考范文

Dear Jenny,

I’m sorry to hear your parents didn’t understand your hobby and took away your Labubu dolls. Don’t be too sad—they might just worry it distracts your study.

Why not talk to them calmly? Explain that collecting dolls brings you joy and you’ll balance it with schoolwork. You can also show them how you organize your collection neatly.

Hope things get better soon!

Yours sincerely,

Li Hua

参考范文

One day, Lily held my hand and said with desire, “I want to go outside and paint a real forest.”

I talked to the doctors, and they agreed to take her to a nearby park with wheelchairs. Wearing a mask, she sat under a tree, holding her watercolor box. Her brush moved gently, and soon green leaves and colorful flowers filled the paper. She smiled brightly, saying, “This is the most beautiful forest I’ve ever painted.”
