A Helping Hand

It is the weekend in New York. Dan and a few friends are waiting in a subway station. They are going to take a train to the cinema. An old woman is standing there. She doesn't look well. The train comes. Dan helps her to get on the train and lets her sit down.

At the stop for the cinema, Dan's friends say, "Hey, Dan! Let's go!" "Sorry," Dan says. "I'll take the lady home."

Dan walks home with the old woman. She lives in a beautiful house. The old woman says, "Thank you. What's your name and address?"

Dan writes his name and address in her notebook. Two days later, he gets a letter and six cinema tickets from the old woman. Dan is happy. He can go to the cinema with his friends again!

Two Trees

It is Christmas time in Canada. Martin drives to his father's house. He gives his father a Christmas tree. His dad is very happy. Then, Martin's brother Jack, gets to their father's house. He also has a Christmas tree for their dad.

"I don't need two trees," says Dad. "Let's give one to the Brown family. They have nothing for Christmas." So the three men drive to the Brown family's house.

It is a small house. Jim is the youngest son of the family. He cannot walk. He sits in a wheelchair. Martin gives Jim a nice, big present. Jack gives them the Christmas tree and their father gives them chocolate, cakes and a roast turkey.

"Merry Christmas!" they say together.
