One possible version:

Dear Jack,

I'm sorry to hear that your grades have dropped since you joined the school sports club this term. Don't worry. I'm writing to help you.

The main reason might be time management. Doing sports may take up too much study time or leave you exhausted, making it hard to focus on your study.

To solve this, you could try the following tips. First, make a detailed schedule—study for 1-2 hours before practice. Second, prioritize tasks. Focus on challenging assignments first and leave easier ones after practice.

With a clear plan, I believe you can boost your academic performance by balancing sports and study wisely.

Yours,
Li Hua

"It has been a companion to me through many years, and I hope it will be to you as well," said Mr. Bennett. Emma was taken aback by the unexpected gesture, feeling a wave of gratitude washing over her. She accepted the book, promising to read it with the same care and attention that Mr.Bennett had shown her.

That evening, as Emma opened the book, a cream-colored card dropped out of it. She picked it up and read the elegant script: "To Emma, may your journey in the city be as enlightening as the stories you read. Keep dreaming and never lose sight of what truly matters. Sincerely, Mr.Bennett." The card was a testament to the kindness of strangers and the unexpected connections one can make in a bustling city. Emma felt a renewed sense of hope and determination, inspired by the generosity of a man she had only just met.
